Ektron CMS400.NET

The Ektron CMS400.NET Activation Code Framework is an ASP.NET component that enables you to design and deploy enterprise-level websites and Web applications in the manner of your choice. The Ektron CMS400.NET Cracked Accounts Framework gives you full control over your data and content. It supports content management, web content authoring, Web site analytics, and many other functions. The Ektron CMS400.NET Framework version 1.5 is based on .NET Framework 2.0 and includes many new features and enhancements. Ektron CMS400.NET Application Architecture: The Ektron CMS400.NET framework consists of four separate modules that act as building blocks and are then connected to each other using the web tier. The Form Designer: the Form Designer is the primary component of the Ektron CMS400.NET Framework. It is a tool for creating custom Web forms for use with a Web server. You can design your Web form, add controls, and associate those controls with validation rules and event handlers easily. The Content Processor: the Content Processor is a set of classes that work with the Form Designer to transfer data from a form to the database, and from the database to a content repository. The Content Processor also handles re-publishing the Web site content, including configuration information, during a Web site deployment. The Content Repository: the Content Repository enables you to store content, such as HTML and text files, in a secure repository. In addition, the Content Repository records Web site history and supports many other content-related functions. The Web Tier: the Web Tier is responsible for the transfer of information between the form designer, content repository, and content processor. It connects the various modules together using the Web Tier. The Ektron CMS400.NET Framework Components: The Ektron CMS400.NET Framework consists of three .NET framework components: The first component is the Ektron CMS400.NET application builder, which integrates with the Content Repository to transfer Web content. The second component is the .NET Framework which provides the programming language integration between the form designer, the Content Processor, and the Repository. The third component is the Web server, which is responsible for rendering the Web content on the client, as well as proxying requests to the content server. The Web server also controls which part of the application is included in an application-level HTTP response. A related article about the Ektron CMS400.NET Framework is: ASP b7e8fdf5c8

What's New In Ektron CMS400.NET?

Easy to get up and running with our Web management component – the first Web CMS developed and hosted within Ektron. Like other Ektron CMS products, CMS400.NET can be used with your Ektron application without the necessity to install anything on your server. Creating Web pages with CMS400.NET can be easy and fun. Just log in as an administrator and you will be taken to the appropriate wizard for the task at hand. There are 3 such wizards – 1 – Site Wizard 2 – Member/Subscriber Wizard 3 – Campaign/Landing Page Wizard The Site Wizard creates a new website and makes it easy for you to start building and viewing your new Web pages without having to log in as an administrator, and without worrying about how to configure your installation. You can add content pages to your website, then add content items to these pages. Your pages can be pages of one content type or a combination of several content types. You can organize your website pages by place, date and time – a special feature of CMS400.NET. For example you can create a page for each day in the month and a subpage for each month. You can also create pages within your site that are a day in advance, for example to be displayed on a special holiday. You can add place and time related content items to your pages. The available wizards can be selected in the CMS400.NET application settings. You can also use the CMS400.NET Editor to create Web pages. Once your pages are created, you can edit them in the CMS400.NET editor and test them. The editor can be configured to any HTML 4.0 or XHTML 1.0 compliant browser. For best results, open the editor in Internet Explorer or Mozilla. What you can do with CMS400.NET:

- You can create Web pages without using the Ektron CMS Administration. Just create and edit your Web pages with the CMS400.NET editor.
- You can create Web pages in several content types: Plain text, Images, HTML, JavaScript, Flash, and Multimedia.
- You can organize your Web pages by place, date and time, content type and much more.
- You can build a simple Website or an advanced Web application.
- You can add links to your pages to enable navigation on your Web site.
- You can export your pages in XML, HTML and Plain text
